

What Documents Should be Translated?

ESSA requires that all official application documents, not in English, be translated by a NAATI (National Accreditation Authority for Translators and Interpreters Ltd) accredited translator.

All costs of translation are the responsibility of the applicant.

What you need to supply:

- » The original certified document, and
- » The NAATI translated document.

Official Documents include:

Certified academic transcripts and testamur

Certified proof of identify

Certified change of name documents

Certification history and eligibility

Compliance with English language requirements

Compliance with Recency of Practice requirements

Reference letters

Other Documents, not in English, can be self-translated:

- » Unit outlines
- » Lectures
- » Lab manuals
- » Assignments completed
- » De-identified case studies or evidence from practise

What you need to supply:

- » The original document, containing logos, letterheads, or other identifiable information, and
- » The self-translated document